A couple of hours ago, Crytek's Community Manager, Alex had sent out an email that contained legit information regarding to both the special edition of Crysis and the languages that Crysis will be available with. Here goes the official clarification statement:

Greetings Community!

Since more and more questions come up regarding the Special Edition of Crysis and the available language versions the game will support, we would like to take the time to inform you about these topics.

Crysis Languages

The game itself will be available in 14 different languages whereas some versions include several languages depending on where they are going to be sold. The "Crysis Special Edition" will be available in English only.

A list of full audio supported languages can be found here:

- * German
- * English
- * Italian
- * Spanish
- * French
- * Turkish
- * Russian
- * Japanese

And here a list of the languages we support via text only (audio is English):

- * Polish
- * Czech
- * Hungarian
- * Traditional Chinese
- * Korean
- * Thai

Crysis Pre-Order/Special Edition – Exclusive Content

This is about clarifying the confusion that came up about the un-lockable vehicle in Multiplayer only that people will receive when pre-ordering Crysis or purchasing the Special Edition of it.

First of all, yes there will be such a vehicle exclusively for the people who pre-order the game and/or purchase the Special Edition. It will be available in multiplayer only and is not transferable to other persons.

Other than that the vehicle needs to be purchased for a specific amount of Prestige Points in one of the available vehicle factories, but can only be entered by the person who bought it. Once this person has left the vehicle it can be used by other team mates and also can be lock-picked by the enemy.

Stay tuned as we will have more exciting news prepared for you! For more information, visit www.nanosuit.com.

Well it looks a bit confusing to me as well, but i guess what he meant is ! That Crysis Special Edition" will be available in English only, but a standard Crysis copy might and will be available in different languages, depends on the country's its been purchased etc. Hope it makes a sence :) and welcome to forums.
